James E. Watson Will Testify in the Lobby Investigation at Washington on Opening Day.

RECORDS SHOW A FALLACY

Congressional Directory Does Not Agree With Col. Mulhall—Watson's Answer to The Star.

Latest Washington dispatches indicate that James E. Watson of this city will be about the first witness in the lobby investigation of the sensational charges made against many public men by Col. M. M. Mulhall, discharged employe of the National Association Manufacturers.

Further evidence is continually coming to light to show the fallacy of Mulhall's charges against former Congressman Watson. L. Wythe Busbey, former secretary to former Speaker Cannon, in a statement given out in Washington, uses the Congressional Directory to show where Mulhall deliberately uttered falsehoods. Mulhall charged Watson was subservient to the manufacturers.

Mr. Mulhall said that after Watson's nomination for the governorship of Indiana, and in appreciation of the work done by the association in his behalf, Mr. Watson, "at the request of Mr. Emory and myself, had three active members of the House Judiciary Committee removed.

"Among the three removed was George A. Pearre who introduced the Pearre injunction bill, which was obnoxious to manufacturers, and in the place of the three men removed there were three subservient members appointed, Mr. Vreeland of New York, and Mr. Bannon of Ohio, being two of them."

"The Congressional Directory does not agree with Mr. Mulhall," said Mr. Busbey. "Mr. Pearre was transferred from the Committee on Judiciary when the Sixtieth Congress organized in December, 1907. But that was a year before Mulhall claims to have aided in the nomination of Mr. Watson for Governor of Indiana. Mr. Pearre had been absent from the House during the greater part of both sessions of the Fifty-ninth congress on account of ill health, so when Mr. Cannon made the committee assignments for the Sixtieth Congress he transferred Mr. Pearre from the active Committee on the Judiciary to other and less exacting committee service.

"Mulhall also is mistaken about the subservient members appointed to the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Bannon was appointed a member of that committee in December, 1906, to fill a vacancy and he was not elected to Congress in 1908, when Mulhall claims to have had influence through Mr. Watson. Mr. Vreeland was not a member of the Judiciary Committee at any time while Mr. Cannon was Speaker."

The following is a statement which Mr. Watson mailed The Indianapolis Star Monday, expecting it to appear in Tuesday morning's issue, but instead The Star printed it only in an early edition of small circulation and

FOOT MASHED WHEN CAUGHT IN RAILS

Harry Stricker Sustained Painful Injury at Shelbyville Yesterday Afternoon.

HELD IN POINTS OF SWITCH

Harry Stricker of this city, conductor on a work train on the I. & C. traction line, sustained a badly mashed foot yesterday afternoon in Shelbyville. Mr. Stricker's foot was caught in the points of a switch and the weight of the car was thrown against it. The accident occurred at the Shelbyville station. The foot was mashed and torn, but no bones were broken. He received medical attention in Shelbyville and again in this city on arriving here. He was taken to his home in West Ninth street. Unless complications arise the injury will not prove serious. He will not be able to work for several weeks. Mr. Stricker only recently returned to work after being off duty for nine weeks with eye trouble.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

The P. O. S. of A. elected the following officers: M. V. Spivey, president; Riley Jones, vice-president; Marshall Pearcey, master of forms; Walter Barringer, conductor; Ambros Cox, inspector; J. C. Gregg, trustee for eighteen months; S. C. Wagoner and Marshall Pearcey, delegates to state camp.

Disappointed Because Old House Does Not Stand at Gettysburg

Writing from Gettysburg, where veterans from the north and south are joining hands in celebrating the semi-centennial of the memorable battle, a staff correspondent to The Indianapolis News has the following concerning Rushville men:

In the group of veterans that marched across Cemetery ridge and up steep Culp's hill, Monday, Ben McFarlan of Rushville, sturdy as an oak, was the leader. He took his comrades at a lively clip down the streets of Gettysburg to search for a house that was struck by a cannon ball a half century ago.

"I can find the house all right," Ben promised. "The fellow who owned the house intended to leave it just as it was before, a relic of the war."

Ben McFarlan and his gray marchers into the past forgot that that was fifty years ago. They plodded along the street peering anxiously at each house but the cannon-ball house was not found.

"It must be here somewhere, boys,"

Ben insisted. "I know it is, for I saw it with my own eyes when we marched into town, the morning after Lee's retreat."

"Yes, I saw it, too," Bill DeMoss declared, agreeing with his fellow-townsmen.

"I'll go over and ask the editor," Ben McFarlan said at last, and then moved across the street to a local newspaper office. The others remained behind to argue as to the location of the cannon-ball house. In a few minutes McFarlan came back, his face bearing an expression of deep disappointment.

"Boys," he reported, "the editor says there is no house like that in Gettysburg, and he's been here twenty years."

"But that was fifty years ago," DeMoss remembered, and the little Hoosier army marched sadly away toward Culp's Hill to see if it, too, had changed.

COUNCIL TABLES REMONSTRANCE

City Orders Perkins Street Paved
Regardless of Complaint From J. M. Gwinn.

FIRST STREET GOES THROUGH

Bids For Both Improvements Will be Received July 15—Street Gang
Short of Men.

Despite a remonstrance against the paving of Perkins street from Second to First street filed by James M. Gwinn, the council will go ahead with the work and the clerk was ordered to advertise for bids. Last night was the time set for hearing remonstrances on the proposed paving improvement in Perkins street and First street. The First street improvement went through without a remonstrance. First street will be paved from Main street east to Perkins street.

The one block in Perkins street did not have as easy sailing as First street, because Capt. Gwinn presented a remonstrance signed by himself and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Gwinn own all the property on the east side of the court house and did not desire that the street be paved. Councilman Parsons moved that the remonstrance be laid on the table. His motion was promptly seconded by Councilman Orme and the road roller was started over Capt. Gwinn. The clerk will receive bids for the work at the regular meeting, July 15. Both streets will be paved with brick and the council hopes to rush the work through.

The action of Capt. Gwinn in remonstrating against the improvement came as a surprise to the members of the council. When the improvement was first planned the resolution called for the improvement of First street as far east as the alley the other side of Perkins street, thus taking in 165 feet of the Gwinn property. It was generally understood that Mr. Gwinn would not remonstrate if the council would modify the plans and not pave the 165 feet in First street. The council believing Mr. Gwinn meant what he said modified the resolution and the street was to be paved from Main street east to Perkins and the one block of Perkins from First street north to Second. Thus all that the Gwinns had to pay for was the Perkins street improvement.

According to Councilman Parsons, Capt. Gwinn made the statement to him in the presence of witnesses that he would not remonstrate if the council would change the plans. If for any reason the improvement should finally be knocked out by Capt. Gwinn the council will modify the First street resolution before the contract is awarded and make it include the 165 feet east of Perkins street and taking in the Gwinn property.

The street committee reported that it had been unable to get the brick street at the corner of Main and First street repaired as it was impossible to get men to do the work. It was suggested that the committee get an estimate from the DeGoler construction company and let them do the work. The committee has charge of the matter.

The city treasurer's report for the month of June was ordered referred to the finance committee. The city engineer reported the preliminary assessment role on the improvement of East Ninth street. Last night was the time set for the hearing of remonstrances on the preliminary assessment role of the East Ninth

Mrs. Roll Richey, Who Was Senseless and Paralyzed by Lightning Late Yesterday, Better Today.

DAMAGE IN POSEY TOWNSHIP

Marshal Moor's House Struck and Family Has Miraculous Escape —Warmer Tomorrow.

The thunder storm of late yesterday afternoon helped some in reducing the suffering from the heat, but the respite is not for long because the weather man's prediction for tomorrow is "warmer," and today the thermometer showed symptoms of ascending to record heights recently attained.

Although thunder showers of yesterday afternoon seemed very severe, very little damage was done over the county. A house was struck and a horse killed in Posey township and Mrs. Roll Richey, living at 319 East Eighth street, was severely shocked, and had not entirely recovered today.

During the storm yesterday afternoon the mercury dropped rapidly and the lowest temperature in two weeks for that time of the day was recorded. The mercury hit the seventy mark before it stopped and there was no higher temperature than that until this morning when the ascent began again. Eighty-nine degrees was the best the mercury could do today.

The weather man is preparing for the Fourth evidently. He says it will be warmer. It will be impossible to be warmer and not be as hot as it has been in the last two weeks. The highest temperature of the year 1912 was recorded the Fourth of July.

The storm of late yesterday was general all over Indiana. One person was killed at Brookville, four at South Bend and three at Hammond. Although rain fell in almost every part of Rush county there was very little electrical display.

Mrs. Roll Richey is suffering very much today from a shock she received during the storm yesterday afternoon when a bolt of lightning struck near her home. She and her husband were on the back porch bottling milk for delivery when the bolt hit. She was stunned by the flash and remained in an unconscious condition for some time.

When she regained her senses it was found that she had lost control of the left side of her body. It was numb, and she had no sense of feeling there. Today that condition had disappeared, but Mrs. Richey was still compelled to remain in bed and felt very badly from the effects of the shock.

The opinion in that vicinity was that A. R. Herkless's barn, which is located about a block east of Richey's home, was hit by the bolt of lightning which shocked Mrs. Richey. Mr. Herkless examined the barn carefully this morning and could find no outward evidence of lightning. Nothing else in that vicinity was struck, so far as could be learned.

The tenant's house on Mrs. Margaret Glendenning's farm southeast of Arlington was hit by lightning and considerably damaged. The tenant, Marshal Moore, his wife and five children had a miraculous escape from death. They were all in the house when the lightning hit, but were not even shocked.

Two large holes were torn in the roof and several window glasses were broken. The plastering was shaken off the walls in some of the rooms. It is considered very fortunate

JURY WAS OUT THREE HOURS

Found Morristown Man Not Guilty of Running "Tiger."

Charles Tillison of Morristown, who was arrested a few weeks ago charged with running a "blind tiger" was found not guilty by a jury in the Shelby circuit court yesterday. In a raid on his place in Morristown the officers found a quantity of beer and whiskey and he was charged with having intoxicating liquors in his possession for unlawful purposes. Tillison's defense was that he had the beer for his own use and his testimony was confirmed by his wife. The jury in the case was out for over three hours before reaching a verdict.

PLAINTIFF BOUGHT LAND

A suit which originally involved notes aggregating $25,000 was called for trial in the circuit court Tuesday before Attorney Lee Tremain as special judge, says a Greensburg exchange. The case is that of Oldham against Carr, brought here from Rush county on a change of venue.

Oldham is seeking to recover on notes given in payment for a rich tract of land in Illinois, which apparently had been taken on a mortgage foreclosure, but which the mortgagee agreed to convey back on payment of the face of the mortgage and other expenses. A charge of fraud was made.

The amount involved in the suit has been trimmed down to $3,000.

FUNERAL OF AUTO VICTIM HELD TODAY

Body of Wycoff Gregor is Laid to Rest Beside Those of Mother and Sisters in Lewisville

HIS UNCLE FEARS CENSURE

The funeral services of Wycoff Gregor, son of Dr. Frank Gregor of Indianapolis, formerly of Carthage, who was killed in an automobile accident near Lewisville Monday evening was held in the Lewisville Presbyterian church this morning at ten o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Dailey of Greenfield. The boy was to be laid to rest in the Lewisville cemetery beside the bodies of his mother and sisters.

A Lewisville dispatch today says that James Baird, an uncle of the boy with whom he was riding when killed, threatened to take his own life after the mishap. Baird, the dispatch says, was crazed with grief and for a time feared that he would be unduly criticised and censured for the accident, as the $25,000 estate inherited by the dead boy from the Wycoff estate in Rush county, will revert to Baird, the boy having died. Baird and his nephew inherited like amounts from the same estate and the grief-crazed man feared that he would be blamed with wilfully causing the accident, because of the estate at stake.

NEW FEATURES ARE EFFECTIVE

C. O. D. Parcel Post Service in Use

It First Day.

THE RULES TO BE FOLLOWED

Reduction of Insurance Rates is Expected to Increase Business in New Department.

The new C. O. D. feature of the parcel post department at the Rushville postoffice became effective yesterday, but no one in Rushville took advantage of it. A reduction in the insurance rates of parcel post packages was also effective yesterday.

The new insurance rule provides that packages valued up to $25 may be insured for 5 cents and packages valued at from $25 to $50 may be insured for 10 cents. Heretofore there has been a flat rate of 10 cents on packages valued up to $50.

The C. O. D. feature will apply only to packages consigned to points in the United States proper. Under it merchandise and other matter admissible to the parcel post may be sent by merchants and others to prospective purchasers and the cost price of the article and charges thereon not exceeding $100 will be collected on delivery and returned by money order to the senders, who will be given a receipt showing the name of the office where it is mailed, the date of mailing, the number of the parcel and the amount due him thereon.

A C. O. D. parcel will be accepted for mailing only at a money order office and only when addressed to a money order office. The fee on each parcel is 10 cents in addition to the postage, and both are reimbursed to the sender by collection from the addressee upon delivery of the parcel.

Each such parcel is insured against

The Man Who Runs the Store.

Are the goods on your shelves advertised by the manufacturers who induced you to stock up with them?

If you were called upon to advertise these goods and to let people know that you sold them, what medium would you employ

Without hesitation, we can answer this question for you: THE LOCAL NEWSPAPERS, of course.

You know, Mr. Dealer, that the one way to create an actual demand that means sales over your counter is through the medium of the daily press. When manufacturers, therefore want to advertise their goods, tell them that the way to help you move these goods from your shelves is to use the newspapers of this city.

And be sure to co-operate with the manufacturer who spends money to bring customers to your store.

Dealers and manufacturers who are interested in local newspaper advertising for nationally distributed products are requested to write to the BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, AMERICAN NEWS PAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION, World Building, New York City.

Mrs. Housewife—“Mrs. Busybody called after dinner yesterday. She always comes after dinner, and it is so aggravating when you have a big wash on scalding. I didn't have time to prepare anything nice for her. And she'll go around telling everybody what a mean table I set.”

Anty Drudge—“She's a regular 'after-dinner' caller. Dinner is what she is after. But why don't you try Fels-Naptha Soap? You would have your wash all through—and dinner, too, before she got here.”

Do you make your head save your hands? With Fels-Naptha Soap you can wash clothes in cool or lukewarm water in about half the time it takes by the old-fashioned boiling, hard-rubbing way. It's easier on the clothes, easier on you, saves fuel, time and bother.

One cake of Fels-Naptha will prove this to you next washday.

Be Careful When You Laugh.

Few people know what dangers lurk in excessive laughter. When we laugh our regular breathing is changed, coming in quick, short respirations because the throat muscles are contracted. It is for this reason that, when laughing very heartily at some good joke, we have often to gasp for breath. At times we are obliged to hold our sides on account of the pain a hearty laugh causes us, owing to the partial suffocation of the lungs through the cutting off of their proper air supply. Every muscle in the body becomes contracted during a continued fit of laughter. Often the blood vessels in the face become congested, causing it to turn red and even purple. Should this congestion continue for any length of time apoplexy resulting in death might well occur. It is better in these circumstances to laugh until we cry, for the shedding of tears relieves the congestion of the brain. Tears caused by grief do good in the same way, and that is how, after a great sorrow, many people have been saved from brain congestion and madness by the timely shedding of a few tears.—London Tit-Bits.

SOME FACTS ON THEIR OWN SIDE

Manufacturers Say Mulhall Did Not Tell It All.

MORE LETTERS COMING OUT

Side Lights on the Alleged Activities of Lobby Maintained in Behalf of Legislation Affecting the Interests of Manufacturers Will Be Presented, Manufacturers Say, Which Will Open Up Matters Mulhall Didn't Mention.

Washington, July 2.—When they appear before the senate investigating committee the officers of the National Association of Manufacturers will introduce some letters on their side. The subpoena which the senate committee has served on James A. Emery, the legal representative of the association here, calls for all correspondence in his offices relating to the Manufacturers' association.

It was learned that the letters which the manufacturers will produce include some by Colonel Martin M. Mulhall, which the colonel has not incorporated in his $10,000 batch. Some of these letters will throw interesting light on the so-called labor lobby in Washington, and the men who are supposed to represent it. It will bring in the names of some Democratic statesmen and probably will lead to an investigation of the activities of the men in Washington who have represented organized labor. New Jersey politics also will figure in this batch of Mulhall's letters.

The correspondence will also show the scores of letters written by Colonel Mulhall urging his re-employment by the N. A. M. subsequent to his dismissal from their service, in which he was making numerous promises and covert threats of the course he would pursue in the event that the association refused his further engagement.

There was a rapid interchange of telegrams between Washington and San Francisco, relative to the serving of subpoenas upon John Kirby, Jr., and D. M. Parry, former presidents of the Manufacturers' association, who were about to sail for Australia. The result was that they abandoned their trip and have headed for Washington.

Inquiry into the charges of Colonel Mulhall by the senatorial investigators of the lobby will not be begun until the week beginning July 14. This is quite contrary to what had been the general impression when the Mulhall charges were first given publicity, but Chairman Overman made the announcement that the sugar and wool lobbies engaged in fighting out the tariff question before congress would receive first attention from the committee.

At today's session the committee hopes to complete the inquiry provided for by the recent Norris resolution. David Lamar, a Wall street operator, who had been mentioned by Edward Lauterbach in his last week's testimony as his principal in a number of financial activities, was summoned, as also were Attorneys Lewis Cass Ledyard, Maxwell Everts and Paul D. Crayth. Otto Kahn of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., also received a telegraphic subpoena, but there is a possibility that he will be excused from appearing, owing to the illness of his wife. The examination of the Union Pacific attorneys and Mr. Lamar, it is thought by Chairman Overman, surely can be completed in two days.

An additional reason for the committee's decision to “clean up” on the two most important phases of the tariff lobby inquiry before going ahead with the investigation of the Mulhall broadside, is the doubt as to the exact intentions of the house of representatives in regard to its own investigation of the Mulhall allegations.

NEW YORK GOVERNOR DENOUNCES ENEMIES

Says They Have Farmed a Trick to Discredit Him.

Philadelphia, July 2.—A beautiful cloak model of this city, Miss Mignon Hopkins, has entered suit against William Sulzer of New York for breach of promise for failure to marry her as he had promised according to a contract made between them.

Miss Hopkins accuses Sulzer of having lived with her for several years at various places in New York city.

Miss Marie Rodenheim, the sister-in-law of the governor, denied that the executive could be the same person named in the suit, because she has known the governor for ten years, six of which he has been married, and in all this time had never heard of the woman.

“If he is the one meant in the suit you may be sure it is a political trick of his enemies, and you may be sure that he will come out with colors flying,” added Miss Rodenheim.

Governor Sulzer was married on July 8, 1908, which Mignon Hopkins says was the wedding day of the William Sulzer she is suing.

“Is the William Sulzer mentioned in your suit and the William Sulzer, governor of New York, one and the same man?” Miss Hopkins was asked.

“Why, of course he is,” she replied, “there isn't any doubt about the matter. He is the man I was so crazy about. He is the man who wooed me and then forgot all about me and married another woman.”

“It's Rot,” Sulzer Said.

Gettysburg, July 2.—Governor Sulzer, who is here for the soldiers' reunion, when asked about the breach of promise suit brought at Philadelphia against a William Sulzer, replied: “It is rot—another move by my enemies to discredit me.”

TWO YOUNG BOYS AND A GUN

Tired of Shooting at Rats, They Aim at and Kill a Child.

South Bend, Ind., July 2.—Two boys, engaged in shooting rats, paused long enough to discuss whether they could hit the figure of a small boy a few feet away. Both thought they could. One fired and the shot instantly killed three-year-old Alfred Winther, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Winther. The boys held for the shooting are Ernest Reynolds, aged ten and Howard Pittman, aged fourteen. Both are in the county jail on a charge of murder.

Both boys have admitted their part in the shooting. Young Reynolds said he had held the gun when it was fired, but his companion shared the blame. He had been partly responsible for the other's having shot.

Though It Has Been Cold These Fifty Years.

FEATURE OF A CELEBRATION

When Harrison Observes Centenary of Its Founding on the Fourth, It Also Will Revive Memories of Invasion by Morgan's Raiders a Half Century Ago, Mounted Men to Follow Route Then Taken.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., July 2.—Preparations for the observance of the centenary of the founding of Harrison and West Harrison have been under way for several weeks, and everything is now in readiness for the celebration on the Fourth.

A noteworthy feature of the day will be 200 mounted men going along the route taken by General John Morgan and his 300 raiders fifty years ago this month. When they swooped down upon Harrison, with Hobson's Union troops only a few hours behind them, Morgan's men remained in Harrison for a day, after burning the bridge across the Whitewater between them and their pursuers.

They took all the horses they could find, looted the stores and compelled the women to bake a few barrels of biscuits. They offered no violence to a single citizen. Several Confederates who participated in this memorable raid are expected to be present on centennial day.

A general homecoming of former Harrison residents is to be another feature of the celebration. Many have already arrived and more are coming. The citizens, long noted for their hospitality, are preparing to entertain all comers.

WORTHLESS MINING STOCK

Sale of the Stuff Has Got a Man in Jail at Laporte.

Laporte, Ind., July 2.—Abner Griffin was arrested here and is held in jail on a charge of selling worthless mining stock. The affidavit was filed by William Hans, president of the Laporte Telephone company, but Hans is only one of several to whom Griffin sold stock. Besides Hans there are a dozen others who say they will make Griffin settle or prosecute him.

He worked here about two years, coming from Rolling Prairie. He is said to have sold more than $12,000 worth of gold mine stocks. Griffin sold a small bunch first and then paid the first dividend. On the strength of this he found many buyers, and when he had completed his sales he left for Seattle. Persons from Laporte who went there last summer were unable to get in touch with him.

Suspected Wife Murderer.

Indianapolis, July 2.—John Norman, thirty-eight years old, a laborer, is being held without bond as a suspected wife murderer. The body of Norman's wife, Daisy, was hauled from the canal near the Blackford street bridge, marked and scarred by blows. An autopsy disclosed death due to strangulation.

Meilhac's Failure.

Meilhac was one of the most sensitive of authors, and M. Felix Duquesnel relates his reception of the news of one of his rare failures at the Odeon. He had taken refuge from his nervousness in the manager's office, and friends came to him from time to time to tell him how things were going. They could only tell him first that things were going badly and then that they were going worse. At the end of the fourth act they no longer thought it worth while to tell him anything at all. He in the meantime had collapsed. He had tumbled out of the armchair, fallen on the floor and rolled under the desk, and it was there that he was found, with his head buried in his hands, when an attendant at last entered to turn out the gas and lock the door.—Paris Temps.

Fearless With Wild Animals.

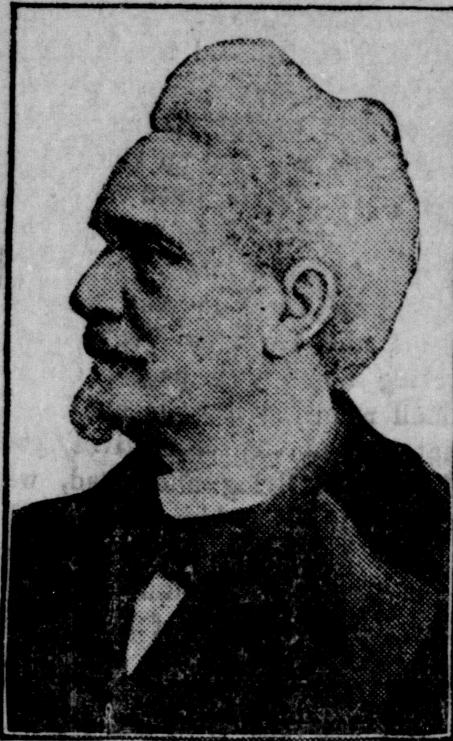

Karl Hagenbeck, the famous dealer in wild animals, became the real friend of the creatures from which the ordinary mortal turns with dread and fear. He lent the lions and tigers which attracted so much attention at the Philadelphia exposition in 1876. On the opening day the man who had trained the animals and under whose direction they were to perform their wonderful tricks fell ill. Hagenbeck never hesitated one moment, but went into the cages, and the animals went through their performances for him and seemed to enjoy his presence. Years later he visited the New York zoo, and there one of the lions roared a welcome to him, evidently recognizing the kind master whom he had not seen in many years.—Exchange.

Fished For Silence.

Faley, the theologian, had an ingenious method of warding off the time waster. When thinking out a problem he betook himself to the river bank with a fishing rod. He never really fished, but he found that people who thought nothing of disturbing his thoughts would keep at a distance so as not to disturb the fish. To give color to the ruse he had his portrait painted with fishing rod in hand. &

FIGHTING PROCEEDING ALL ALONG THE LINE

Each of the Three Contenders Blames the Others.

London, July 2.—The Greek government has ordered a general advance on the entire Bulgarian line, following the surrender of the Bulgarian garrison at Salonica, according to a dispatch from Athens. This places the Bulgarian troops in a difficult position with hostile Serbia on one side and advancing Greeks on the other.

The fighting Monday extended for 140 miles, and from all accounts the Bulgarians got a little the better of it. They captured one large town and as far as reported lost only at Salonica.

Fighting between the Greeks and Servians on the one side and the Bulgarians on the other was still proceeding all along the line from Istip to Eleuthera, according to a dispatch from Sofia. All the governments concerned declared that their troops had been instructed not to take the offensive unless attacked, and each party was trying to throw on the other the responsibility of the commencement of the war between nations which hitherto had been allies.

A DISTRESSING TRAGEDY

Four Young Sisters Drown While Bathing in St. Joe River.

Elkhart, Ind., July 2.—Four daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Schwyn, two miles east of Elkhart, were drowned in the St. Joseph river. They were Alice, aged sixteen; Clara, aged thirteen; Ida, aged eleven, and Grace, aged seven.

The girls were regarded as expert swimmers and canoeists. They had gone to pick cherries, and it is thought they decided to go bathing because of the heat. The theory is that the youngest got beyond her depth and sank, and the others went to her rescue.

Dead Girl's Employer Held.

Salisbury, Md., July 2.—Harold W. Smith, manager of the Home Gas company, was arrested charged with homicide in connection with the death of Miss Florence Wainwright, who was found dead in the office of the gas company, where she was employed as bookkeeper, on the evening of June 20. The coroner's jury found that Florence Wainwright came to her death as the result of a criminal operation. Smith was released on $5,000 bail.

WEATHER MADE TO YOUR ORDER

German Inventor Can Cause or Prevent Rain.

TO VISIT UNITED STATES.

Richard Rodrian of Berlin Anxious to Demonstrate to Government That His Theories Are Correct—Laughed at in Germany, He Says, He Will Seek Vindication Here.

Richard Rodrian, Berlin's "weather maker," is coming to America this summer, hoping to interest the United States agricultural department in his theory of weather control, according to recent dispatches from Germany. The electro-technician, who evolved the theory that weather changes are caused by electrical activity, which can be controlled by the use of electrical instruments, has been unable because of lack of funds to construct powerful instruments. However, he declares that he was responsible for the pleasant weather in eastern and southern Germany this year on Whitmonday and Ascension day in the face of official predictions of rain.

Theory In Electricity.

"I am convinced," said Herr Rodrian recently, "that not only storms and tornadoes, but floods and earthquakes, are caused by electrical changes in the air. Often floods are much greater than the amount of water that has fallen. The earth is probably interlaced with canals of gas, which, when the pressure changes, expand, forcing the underground water to the surface. This pressure also produces earthquakes. In all the disturbances in Europe since I began my investigations the weather map invariably indicated the coming catastrophe. I shall study the American charts and shall prove that the same is the case there."

"These catastrophes could be avoided without a great outlay of capital. America has the duty of guarding the Panama canal from earthquakes and of saving large regions devastated by floods. I am trying to interest the government because the power of changing the weather also means power to cause any desired weather, and unless this power is in the hands of a great international alliance catastrophes of a terrible nature might be produced. I was once approached by some Americans who wished me to blight the American cotton crop after they had laid in a big stock of cotton. I was also asked to cause an earthquake in France, but I am interested in the assistance and not in the destruction of humanity."

Seeks to Be Vindicated.

Herr Rodrian is coming to America with sufficient funds to conduct experiments. He says he is seeking vindication and not a fortune. He has been ridiculed for years by the Berlin newspapers, and while given a hearing by scientists, he feels that the lack of a university degree has prevented fair trials from being made. He says he made a contract with one German state to save off freezing weather an entire winter and failed to do so on only one day. He had the financial backing of a friend and got a small sum from the Hotel Keepers' association, which was interested in his efforts to bring good weather on holidays.

REPAID A THOUSANDFOLD.

Benefactor of Lad Seeking Education Bequeathed a Million.

Dr. E. S. Higley of Wellston, O., has just been repaid $1,000,000 for the loan in the early eighties of $700 to Charles Froelich, a struggling farmer lad, to complete his education as a mining engineer. Soon after Froelich went to Australia and was not heard from for several years.

Eight years ago Froelich, grown beyond the physician's recognition, walked into Dr. Higley's office and paid the $700, with compound interest. He had been successful in Australia and South Africa and was wealthy.

After a few weeks Froelich returned to Australia. Nothing was heard from him until recently, when a lawyer arrived from Melbourne, Australia, and notified Dr. Higley that Froelich had died without relatives and had left his entire estate, valued at $1,000,000, to his benefactor. Dr. Higley is seventy years old.

TO READ DEAD MAN'S BRAIN.

Scientists Secretly Test Theory of De-funct Harvard Professor.

Scientists in the Harvard medical school are trying to read the brain of the late Dr. Maurice Howe Richardson, ex-member of the faculty of that institution. The examinations are being conducted secretly in the neuro-pathological department and under the direction of Dr. E. E. Southard.

Dr. Richardson was a firm believer that thoughts made definite lines in the brain, and the present examination is being conducted in accordance with his wishes as expressed in his will. He believed that a person's thoughts were recorded and were at the time of thinking visible on the outer walls of the cerebrum. He held that if these lines were read and the seat of the thought located it would make it possible to correct defects in the brain by surgical operations.

Knox Marshmallow Cream
 1/2 envelope Knox Sparkling Gelatine.
 1/2 cup cold water. 1 cup granulated sugar.
 1/2 cup boiling water. 1 teaspoon vanilla.
 Whites of 4 eggs. 1 teaspoon lemon extract.

Soak gelatine in cold water five minutes; add boiling water and place over tea kettle until thoroughly dissolved. Cool, but do not chill. Stir sugar in dissolved gelatine. Beat whites of eggs very light, and to the eggs add gelatine and sugar a few spoonfuls at a time, beating constantly. Divide in two parts, and to one part add pink color and flavor with vanilla, about one teaspoonful. To the white part add one teaspoonful lemon extract. Mold in layers, adding pecan nuts to the pink part and maraschino cherries to the white part. May be served with or without whipped cream.

Two Packages—Plain and Acidulated.
 Both Making Two Quarts (1/2 gallon) of Jelly.

Notice to Absentee

State of Indiana, County of Rush, ss: In the Rush Circuit Court, September Term, 1913.

Robert S. Longfellow vs. Ferman Allred, Cause No. 44.

Notice is hereby given that said plaintiff has filed his complaint in said court against said defendant, Ferman Allred, praying for the appointment of an administrator for the estate of said defendant, for the reason that he, said Ferman Allred, has absented himself from his usual place of residence, and gone to parts unknown, for and during a continuous period of more than five years last past, and has left personal property in Rush County, Indiana, without having made any sufficient provision for the management of the same, which property is suffering waste for the want of proper care, and that the family, heirs, and kindred of said defendant are in need of the use and proceeds of such property, for their support and education.

Said defendant, is therefore hereby notified to appear in the Rush Circuit Court at Rushville, Rush County, Indiana, on Monday, September 1st, 1913, the same being the first day of the September 1913 term of said court, and show cause, if any there be, why said petition should not be granted.

Witness my hand and official seal this 10th day of June, 1913.

Mulhall's Reputation.

The Chicago Tribune, which probably paid a large sum for the "exclusive" rights, since it was copyrighted, of Col. M. M. Mulhall's statement of the alleged influence of the National Manufacturers association on national legislation through certain legislators, says that Mulhall was actuated by only "patriotic motives" in making the statement.

The most biased person will have to admit that it was through the spirit of getting even that he let out such assertions. The Indianapolis Star admits that. The facts prove it. He was dismissed by the manufacturers association for reasons which the public should know, to understand the man, and which the manufacturers should give out.

When down and out, he resorted to every method to be reinstated in the good graces of the association by which he was employed for years. James A. Emory, chief counsel for the manufacturers, says that he tried blackmail and failed and that now he has resorted to slander. We know that he importuned James E. Watson to use his influence to have him retained by the association and that Mr. Watson replied he had no connection with the association and could do nothing for him.

Now comes to light how Mulhall has used his inventive, diabolical mind to remunerate himself. Richard Barry, a New York magazine writer, only last week instituted a suit in the New York supreme court to collect $5,000 promised him by Mulhall.

Mulhall furnished the alleged facts and Barry shaped them into a readable story which was sold to a newspaper for $10,000. Barry says that Mulhall agreed to pay him half, but that he never did it. Barry says these "political letters" he used in his article are the basis of Mulhall's latest "confession."

"The statement of Mulhall," says Emory illustrates the most dangerous and malicious form of falsehood—that which fabricates a tissue of lies on a slight foundation of truth.

"A prompt investigation by an existing committee, which this association would warmly welcome, will reveal the motives of this slander and the character of this venal assassin of public men. It might also expose the character of the labor lobby, which makes our efforts necessary.

"Since the forced severance of his relationship with the National Association of Manufacturers over a year ago Mulhall has undertaken by repeated pleadings and threats to procure employment, and this is probably the final effort of this individual to wreak a well-paid revenue by a grossly false attack on those who found him unworthy of trust. Failing in blackmail, he resorted to slander."

Newspaper Fairness.
It is a popular belief that newspapers are unfair and the wilful actions of some give fair ground for such belief. The manner in which the prejudiced Indianapolis Star treated James E. Watson in the latest attempt to harm his personal character is a case in point.

Sunday night Mr. Watson received a query from the Star asking his reply to Col Mulhall's charges that he had been assisted in his campaign for Governor in Indiana in 1908 by the National Association of Manufacturers. Mr. Watson made answer immediately, not knowing the context of Mulhall's statement.

As it is well known now, Mulhall made a dastardly attempt to damage Watson personally, and he bringing in this connection of the story of the drinking by Mr. Watson of six cocktails in Mulhall's room in the 1908 campaign, when the former congressman was a candidate on a county option platform, was so far-fetched and out of reason that every rank partisan will be willing to admit the unfairness of it.

The Indianapolis Star made capital of such sensational tales, back of which there was only the word of a man who has been denounced as a blackmailer and slanderer. Mr. Watson had no opportunity to reply to Mulhall until the Tuesday morning's edition. Expecting that he would get as fair treatment as a man who the Star had never heard of before, whose chief stock in trade for a year has been to traduce reputable citizens. Mr. Watson dictated a careful reply to Mulhall's charges and sent it by registered letter to the Star.

The Star, instead of giving the reply the same publicity as the charges, printed Watson's answer in a secluded corner of the first edition which circulates in Indianapolis and in the far corners of Indiana, and then took it from the other editions.

People who believe in fair play can see nothing fair in such treatment. It clearly shows the Star's attitude against public men who do not share its views, and especially Mr. Watson, on whom it has made many unfair attacks for reasons that are too obvious to mention.

Undoubtedly an injustice was done Mr. Watson by Mulhall and the Indianapolis Star, instead of trying to rectify it, is a coadjutor in the work of besmirching a man's character.

Certain Democratic newspapers are denouncing the Democratic statesmen named by Col. Mulhall as a part of the lobby of the National Association of Manufacturers. That say they are not Democrats. It follows, then, that a man who is tempted and falls, considering for the moment Mulhall's charges are true, can no longer be a Democrat. The logic of their argument is that a Democratic statesman could not be untrue to his pledges, but oh, you wicked Republicans!

Our old Republican friend, A. W. Tracy of Newcastle, who switched Bull Moose last summer when he was offered a position in the new party's press bureau at Washington, D. C., and who, after the election, launched a Bull Moose newspaper, known as The Newcastle Star, says in the course of a four-column article in Monday morning's issue that the Mulhall charges place "Watson first in the list of men who received money while in office from the manufacturers' association," which very thing Col. Mulhall very cleverly avoided because he knew he would have trouble in proving such an assertion.

We are hearing from our Democratic brethren that the tariff is to blame for all the evils of legislators. Fortunately the tariff's shoulders are broad because it has born much heavier burdens. But Washington correspondents tell us that the activity of the National Association of Manufacturers has been to combat organized labor and not to prevent tariff legislation.

WILL LIKELY BE FIRST WITNESS

left it out of the remaining two, one of which comes to Rushville:

With reference to the publication that appeared in the Chicago Tribune and the New York World Sunday morning, a small portion of which was reproduced by Mr. Ludlow in the Star this morning, I desire to state through your columns that in part the statement is true and in part false.

I have repeatedly stated, both publicly and privately, and have never in any wise attempted to conceal the fact, that I was in the employ of The National Association of Manufacturers at the special session of 1900 for the purpose of aiding in the passage of a measure providing for a tariff commission. I was in Washington a part of the time during that session for that purpose, and evidently labored to some effect as Mr. Mulhall states that I wrote the provision that was finally enacted. In this, as in many other things, he is in error. Nothing whatever concerning this matter was inserted in the bill that passed the House. Senator Aldrich wrote the provision that appeared in the Senate Bill, with a signal suggestion from me, and the Conference Committee afterwards modified the senate provision and enacted the amendment to the Payne bill that enabled President Taft to appoint his tariff commission.

I never had the slightest connection in the world with the National Association of Manufacturers before that time nor since that time, was never employed by them for any purpose before that time nor since that time and have never had any other employment at their hands except the one above stated.

Now as to Mulhall: He came to Indiana in my campaign for Governor and brought with him letters from the Honorable James S. Sherman, late Vice-president, and at that time Chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, and also from the Honorable Henry C. Loudenslager, at that time Secretary of the same committee. These gentlemen recommended Colonel Mulhall to me as an active worker and aid that he might possibly be able to aid me in my campaign. This he thought he could do as well as render aid in the various Congressional districts of the state.

My recollection is that he remained but a short time when an article appeared in the News with regard to him asking who he was and what business he had in Indianapolis in the campaign. Soon after that, as I now recall, he re-appeared in Indianapolis and published a card in the News in which he said that he had had a wide experience in labor disputes and labor difficulties and that he thought he could render me service in organizing laboring men for me. It will be recalled that at that time union labor was pretty solidly arrayed against me and that its leaders were waging an unrelenting warfare against my candidacy. I was very glad, therefore, to avail myself of any knowledge or experience Colonel Mulhall might have in that direction and so told him. I do not now recall that Colonel Mulhall remained in Indiana only a portion of the time, but as to that I have no distinct recollection.

I spoke over two hundred times in that campaign, practically all of my time was taken up in the fields, and I only visited Indianapolis occasionally and most of those times were when I went there to change cars in order to make my appointments.

There were individual manufacturers for my nomination and also individual manufacturers for the nomination of one or the other of my opponents, but it is not true that either the National Association or The Indiana Association of Manufacturers as an organization favored my nomination. The same is true as to my election. Many manufacturers aided me to the extent of their ability and gave me, as well as the committee, the benefit of their advice and their counsel, but it is not true that either Association as such financed me personally or my campaign.

Colonel Mulhall never gave a single dollar in his life, nor did any representative of the National Association of Manufacturers as such ever contribute one penny to me. I paid a considerable part of the expenses of my campaign, including my assessment, and the remainder was supplied by my friend, John W. McCordle, but to this day I do not know who contributed the money to him. After the campaign was over, I asked him to furnish me with a list of those who had so kindly contributed, but he declined to do so and stated that there was no reason why I should know.

In his statement in the Chicago Tribune and the New York World, covering about two pages, Colonel Mulhall mentions a large number of Senators and Representatives, past and present, living and dead, who received aid from him or from the National Association of Manufacturers through him; and this comprises the chief body of his charge. I know nothing whatever concerning these matters, never heard of them before and have only my private opinion respecting them, which is that none of them are true.

It is charged that he has letters from me and that may be true. I tried to be good to everybody who was rendering me assistance in my campaign, and I wrote many thousands of letters during that struggle both before and after nomination. It is possible that Colonel Mulhall has letters from me and when he reappears before the committee to surrender all the letters, these he has from me will speak for themselves. He says that on one occasion I wrote him a letter that he at once came on to Indiana and raised $22,000 which was turned over to Mr. Goodrich, the then State Chairman. He does not say that this money was turned over to me personally but to the committee; he does not say that this, or any other money, was contributed by the National Association of Manufacturers, but by individuals. In other words, his charge on this point amounts to a statement that he raised $22,000, that it was paid by individual manufacturers and that he turned over to the State Committee. I had then and have now no knowledge of such transaction, but suppose that it be true, then what? These men had a perfect right to give the money and the committee had a perfect right to take it, and there was nothing illegal, much less criminal about it, and my culpability in the matter does not appear. I know that this National Association of Manufacturers did not give me a dollar in that campaign.

I know that this National Association of Manufacturers did not give me a dollar in that campaign.

Colonel Mulhall relates a story about my capacity for strong drink that is almost too absurd to require denial, and one that is untrue in every particular.

He says that he went into his room on a certain occasion and ordered six cocktails, three for him and three for me, but that owing to the very generous proportions of my thirst, he quietly withdrew from the room, locked the door, and permitted me to quaff the contents of the six goblets in solitary bliss. All I have to say about that statement is that it is a straight-out lie and that no part of it is true. It would not have been necessary for him to remain long in Indiana in that campaign without having knowledge of the charges of insobriety made against me throughout that struggle, and he must have known that, if I had always been a drinking man before, I would have had too much self-control and too much political sagacity to have gone about drinking with persons with whom I had but casual acquaintance at the best, and that it would have been the height of personal folly and political stupidity for me to have consumed six cocktails at one time. The whole thing is an absolute fabrication and I shall give it no further attention, but even if true, I cannot see its relationship or its relevancy to a lobby investigation by the United States Senate.

Some months ago, as I afterwards learned, Colonel Mulhall was dismissed by the National Association of Manufacturers and his connection with that body severed. About two months ago he wrote me a letter and asked me to help him be re-instated and said that I could be of service to him. I wrote and asked him how he thought I could help him and he responded that I could influence the officers of the Association to again give him employment and once more re-establish him on the payroll. To this I responded that I had no connection in the world with that organization, knew nothing whatever concerning its plans and operations, and it would be useless for me to attempt to assist him. However, I told him I would write Mr. John Kirby, of Dayton, the then President of the Association, with respect to it. I did this, and Mr. Kirby responded in a letter that I cannot make public without his consent.

Boiled down, and disconnected with startling headlines and spectacular verbiage, the charges against me are threefold.

First, that I represented the National Association of Manufacturers in the special session of 1900 in obtaining a tariff commission. Thus I admit.

Second, that the National Association to Manufactures financed my campaign and financed me personally in 1908, when I ran for Governor. This is not true.

Third, that I drank with Mulhall in my campaign in 1908. Neither is this true.

This is the second time that an intimation has come from Washington that I would be subpoenaed to appear before the Senate Committee conducting the lobby investigation, and I am now, as I have been in the past, not only ready but anxious to appear and give testimony. I have nothing whatever to conceal, and have never attempted to conceal my connection with this Association, and I know of no reason to alter the course of my conduct now.

A Conservative Scotch Beadle.
Before he went to Glasgow Dr. Story was for many years minister of Rosemeath, and his old beadle was often sorely perplexed by his "innovations"—standing to sing, kneeling at prayer and various other "seemly alterations." His method of objecting to the changes "was to enter the vestry at the close of the service, firmly clasping the big pulpit Bible and then to lay it heavily upon the table, saying, 'I'm dune wi' ye noo, I'm fair dune wi' ye; I canna thole it any longer. I hae carried the Bible for thirty years, but I canna carry it any longer; I'm fair dune wi' ye.'" Dr. Story would reply, "Hoot, toot, John; you'll think better of that." "Na, na, sir, I canna thole you. I'll carry the bulks nae langer; I'm dune wi' ye." But the beadle thought better of it, and remained with Dr. Story "as his sure and trusty henchman" till the end of his life.—Westminster Gazette.

Death, Expert Mechanic.
"It is," writes Wilhelm Lamszus in "The Human Slaughter House," "as though Death had scrapped his scythe for old iron, as if nowadays he had graduated as expert mechanic. They have ceased to mow corn by hand nowadays. By this time of day even the sheaves are gathered up by machinery. And so they will have to shovel our millions of bodies underground with burying machines."

As to falling in battle: "Once it was a knightly death, an honorable soldier's death; now it is death by machinery. That is what is sticking in my gullet. We are being hustled from life to death by experts, by mechanicians. And, just as they turn out buttons and pins by wholesale methods of production, so they are now turning out the crippled and the dead by machinery."

lish him on the payroll. To this I responded that I had no connection in the world with that organization, knew nothing whatever concerning its plans and operations, and it would be useless for me to attempt to assist him. However, I told him I would write Mr. John Kirby, of Dayton, the then President of the Association, with respect to it. SIMULTANEOUS SINGING OF SONGS IS PLANNED.

To extend simultaneously a wave of patriotism from the Atlantic to the Pacific on the Fourth of July is the plan of W. C. Grigsby of Minneapolis, says the Indianapolis News. It is planned to have the orchestras in all theaters, moving picture shows and concerts, arrange to play between 8:00 and 8:30 (eastern time) the airs of "Columbia," "America" and "The Star Spangled Banner," and the audiences standing.

With co-operation on the part of theatrical managers and chairmen of committees having charge of celebrations, it is expected that at the given hour the stirring strains of the national anthem will resound at the same time from the voices of hundreds of thousands of patriotic citizens throughout the United States.

DO HONOR TO DEAD COMRADE

Indianapolis Organizations Pay Last Tribute to Rear Admiral Brown at Funeral Today.

HONORED BY LOYAL LEGION

Served as Commander For 5 Years, Gen. Lew Wallace Being Only Other One so Honored.

George H. Thomas Post, G. A. R. and the Indiana Commandery of the Loyal Legion of Indianapolis, of which Rear Admiral George Brown was a member, were represented at the funeral of the admiral at the family home, 860 Middle drive Woodruff Place at 10 o'clock today in Indianapolis.

The members of the Loyal Legion met at 9 o'clock this morning to select delegates to the funeral. Neither the Loyal Legion nor the G. A. R. went to the cemetery.

Admiral Brown was active in the Loyal Legion from the time of the organization of the Indiana commandery, in 1888, and had the distinction of being one of the two men who held the office of commander of the organization for more than one term. He served as commander from 1897 until 1902. The other member honored with more than one term was Maj. Gen. Lew Wallace, who served nine consecutive years. Admiral Brown missed few meetings of the organization.

The thoroughness of Admiral Brown, one of the qualities which brought about his rapid advancement in the naval service, was commented upon yesterday by John L. Ketcham, a personal friend, says the Indianapolis Star. Mr. Ketcham said that he had been surprised on several occasions at Admiral Brown's ability to talk on almost any topic.

"One would not think that a man of his responsibilities would give much thought to such a subject as coal," said Mr. Ketcham, "yet he had an exact knowledge of its fuel value. He had all of the coal product of the world catalogued on the end of his tongue and knew its combustible properties to a fraction. Since he used it on his ships, he must know the exact efficiency. He was equally thorough in everything that pertained to his business as a naval officer.

"He was a captain of few words and one of the most successful disciplinarians. When he gave orders they were final, and right. A fine man."

KEEPING AVERAGE DOWN.

Muncie Press: Senator Beveridge declares that the average life of a political party is thirty years. It's even less than that, but in order to bring down the average that would otherwise be created by long lived parties, there have to be a lot of short lived parties. There have been a lot of them, and if election returns prove anything, the organization the senator is trying to keep alive, is destined to help keep down the average.

BOY SCOUTS ARE GIVEN MEDALS

Organization is Praised by Grand Army Commander in Presentation Speech at Gettysburg.

THEY ASSIST WAR VETERANS

Local Boy Scouts will be pleased to know that medals were presented to Boy Scouts assisting war veterans attending the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg. The medals are similar to those worn by the veterans and the guests of the Pennsylvania commission and were presented by General Alfred B. Beers, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Praise is coming to the scouts, not only from those drawing on their time and attention, but from camp officials, army officers, and others who have seen them at work. Details of the boys meet every incoming train, to point out the way for the veterans through the tented city and to carry the baggage of the more feeble ones. Others carry messages and run errands for the old soldiers, while ninety-six of the youngsters have been assigned to the Red Cross service. It is a common sight around the emergency hospitals to see a little fellow come staggering in with a heat-stricken veteran leaning heavily on his shoulder.

In his speech presenting the medals to the boys, General Beers highly commended the principles of their organization and declared that one-half of those who carried muskets during the civil war were between the ages of sixteen and eighteen and that "the war was fought by those who were under twenty-one."

CHAPTER XII.
Night Rider Work.

I SEEN the feller from the telephone exchange run down the street a little ways as the first rush hit the square and fire his pistol twice. Then he turned and made fur an alleyway, but as he turned they let him have it. He threw up his arms and made one long stagger right across the bar of light that streamed out of the windows, and he fell into the shadder, out of sight, just like a scorched moth drops dead into the darkness from a torch.

Out of the middle of that bunch of riders come a big voice, yelling numbers, instead of men's names. Then different crowds lit out in all directions—some on foot, while others held their bosses—fur they seemed to have a plan laid ahead.

And then things began to happen. They happened so quick and with such a whirl it was all unreal to me—shots and shouts and windows breaking as they blazed away at the store fronts all around the square, and orders and cuss words ringing out between the noise of shooting, and with electric lights shining on them as they tossed and trampled, and showing up masked faces here and there, and pounding hoofs and hoeses screaming like humans with excitement, and spurts of flame squirted sudden out of the ring of darkness round about the open place.

From way down along the railroad track they come a sort of blundering roar, like blasting big stumps out, and then another and another. Purty soon, down that way, a slim flame licked up the side of a big building there and crooked its tongue over the top. Then a second big building right beside it ketched afire, and they both showed up in their own light, big and angry and handsome, and the light showed up the men in front of 'em, too—guarding 'em, I guess, fur fear the town would get its nerve and make a fight to put 'em out. It was tobacco burning in them warehouses.

But that town had some fight in her, in spite of being took unexpected that a-way. It wasn't no coward town. The light from the burning buildings made all the shadders around about seem all the darker. And every once in awhile, after the surprise of the first rush, they would come thin little streaks of fire out of the darkness somewhere and the sound of shots. And then a gang of riders would gallop in that direction, shooting up all creation. But by the time the warehouses was all lit up so that you could see they was no hope of putting them out the shooting from the darkness had jest about stopped.

It looked like them big tobacco warehouses was the main object of the raid. Fur when they was burning past all chance of saving the leader sings out an order, and all that is not on their hoeses jumps on, and they rides away from the blaze. You bet I laid low on them boards while they was going by, and flattened myself out till I felt like a shingle.

As I hear their hoof sounds getting farther off I lifts up my head agin. But they wasn't all gone either. Three that must have been up to some per-ticler devilry of their own come galloping across the square to ketch up with the main bunch. Two was quite a bit ahead of the third one, and he yelled to them to wait. But they only laughed and rode harder.

And then fur some fool reason that last feller pulled up his hoes and stopped. He stopped in the road right in front of me and wheeled his hoes across the road and stood up in his stirrups and took a long look at that blaze. He stood still fur most a minute like that, black agin the red sky, and then he turned his hoes' head and jabbed him with his stirrup edge.

Jest as the hoes started they come a shot somewhere behind me. The hoes jumped forward at the shot, and the feller swayed sideways and dropped his gun and lost his stirrups and come down heavy on the ground. His hoes galloped off. I heard the noise of some one running off through the dark and stumbling agin the lumber. It was the feller who had fired the shot running away. I suppose he thought the rest of them riders would come back when they heard that shot and hunt him down. But purty soon I hear them all crossing that plank bridge agin and knowed they was gone.

At first I guessed the feller on the ground must be dead. But he wasn't, fur purty soon I hear him groan. He had mebbe been stunned by his fall and was coming too enough to feel his pain. I didn't feel like he orter be left there. So I clumb down and went over to him. He was lying on one side all kind of huddled up. There had been a mask on his face, like the rest of them, with some hair onto the bottom of it to look like a beard. But now it had slipped down till it hung loose around his neck by the string. They was enough light to see he wasn't nothing but a young feller. He raised himself slow as I come near him, leaning on one arm and trying to set up. The other arm hung loose and helpless. Half setting up that a-way he made a feel at his belt with his good hand, as I come near. But that good arm was his prop, and when he took it off the ground he fell back. His hand come away empty from his belt.

The big six shooter he had been feeling fur wasn't in its holster, anyhow. It had fell out when he tumbled. I picked it up in the road jest a few feet from his shotgun and stood there with it in my hand, looking down at him.

"Well," he says, in a drawly kind of voice, "yo' can finish yo' little job now—yo' shot me from the darkness, and now yo' done got my pistol. I reckon yo' better shoot agin."

"Bo," I says, "you got nerve. I like you, Bo. I didn't shoot you, and I ain't going to. The feller that did has went. I'm going to get you out of this. Where you hurt?"

"Hip," he says, "but that ain't much. The thing that bothers me is this arm. It's done busted. I fell on it."

I drug him out of the road and back of the lumber pile I had been laying on and hurt him considerable a-doing it.

"Now," I says, "what can I do fur you?"

"Yo' mighty good to me," says he, "considering yo' are no kin to this here part of the country at all. I reckon by yo' talk yo' are one of them d—Yankees, ain't yo'?"

That there war was fought forty years ago, but some of them fellers down there don't know d— and Yankee is two words yet; but, shucks! They don't mean no harm by it. So I tells him I am a d— Yankee and asts him agin if I can do anything fur him.

"Yes," he says, "yo' can tell a friend of mine Bud Davis has happened to an accident and get him over here quick with his wagon to tote 'em home."

I was to go down the railroad track past them burning warehouses till I come to the third street and then turn to my left. "The third house from the track has got an iron picket fence in front of it," says Bud, "and it's the only house in that part of town which has. Beaugard Peoples lives there. He is kin to me."

"Yes," I says, "and Beaugard is jest as likely as not going to take a shot at me."

"He won't shoot," says Bud, "if yo' go about it right. Beaugard ain't going to be asleep with all this going on in town tonight. Yo' rattle on the iron gate and he'll holler to know what yo' all want."

"If he don't shoot first," I says.

"When he hollers yo' cry back at him yo' have found his old dead hoes in the road. It won't hurt to holler that loud, and that will make him let you within talking distance."

"His old dead hoes?"

"Yo' don't need to know what that is. He will." And then Bud told me enough of the signs and words to say and things to do to keep Beaugard from shooting—he said he reckoned he had trusted me so much he might as well go the hull hog. Beaugard, he says, belongs to them riders too.

I made a long half circle around them burning buildings, keeping in the dark, fur people was coming out in bunches, now that it was all over with, watching them fires burning and talking excited and saying the riders should be follered—only not follering.

I found the house Bud meant, and they was a light in the second story window. I rattled on the gate and after a lot of talk told Beaugard what I wanted.

"Come on in," he says.

He shut the door behind us and lighted a lamp agin. And we looked each other over. He was a scrawny little feller, with little gray eyes set near together and some sandy complected whiskers on his chin. I told him about Bud and what his fix was. He said:

"I don't see how on airth I kin do it. My wife's jest had a baby. Do yo' hear that?"

And I did hear a sound like kittens mewling, somewhere upstairs.

"Yes," I says, "you better stay with it. Lend me a rig of some sort and I'll take Bud home."

So we went out to Beaugard's stable with a lantern and hitched up one of his hoeses to a light road wagon. He went into the house and come back agin with a mattress fur Bud to lie on and a part of a bottle of whisky, and I drove back to that lumber pile. I guess I nearly killed Bud getting him into there. But he wasn't bleeding much from his hip—it was his arm was giving him fits.

We went slow, and the dawn broke with us four miles out of town. It was broad daylight and early morning noises stirring everywhere when we drove up in front of an old farmhouse, with big brick chimbleys built on the outside of it, a couple of miles farther on.

As I drove into the yard a bareheaded old nigger with a game leg throwed down an armful of wood he was gathering and went limping up to the veranda as fast as he could. He bawled out:

"Oh, Marse Willyum! Oh, Miss Lucy! Dey've brung him home! Dar he!"

A little, bright, black eyed old lady like a wren comes running out of the house and chirps:

"Oh, Bud! Oh, my honey boy! Is he dead?"

"I reckon not, Miss Lucy," says Bud, raising himself up on the mattress as she runs up to the wagon, and trying to act like everything was all a joke. She was jest high enough to kiss him over the edge of the wagon box. A worried looking old gentleman come out the door, seen Bud and his mother kissing each other, and then says to the old nigger man:

"Take the bay mare quick and go fur Dr. Po'ter, George." Then he comes to the wagon and says:

"So they got yo', Bud? You would go night riding like a rowdy and a thug? Are yo' much hurt?"

He said it easy and gentle, more than mad. But Bud, he flushed up, pale as he was, and didn't answer his dad direct. He turned to his mother and said:

"Miss Lucy, dear, it would 'a' done yo' heart good to see the way them trust warehouses blazed up!"

And the old lady, smiling and crying both to once, says, "God bless her brave boy!" But the old gentleman looked mighty serious, and his worry settled into a frown between his eyes, and he turns to me and says:

"Yo' must pardon us, sir, fo' neglecting to thank yo' sooner." I told him that would be all right, fur him not to worry none. And him and me and Mandy, which was the nigger cook, got Bud into the house and into his bed. And after quite a while George gets back with Dr. Porter.

He sets Bud's arm and he locates the bullet in him, and he says he guesses he'll do in a few weeks if nothing like blood poisoning nor gangrene nor inflammation sets in.

I eat my breakfast with the old gentleman, and then I took a sleep until time fur dinner. They wouldn't hear of me leaving that night. I fully intended to go on the next day, but before I knowed it I been there a couple of days and have got very well acquainted with that family.

Well, that was a house divided agin itself. Miss Lucy she is awful favorable to all this night rider business. She would of like to been a night rider herself, but the old man he says law and order is the main pint.

"But you were in the Kuklux Klan yo'self," says Miss Lucy.

The old man says the Kukluxes was working fur a principle—the principle of keeping the white supremacy on top of the nigger race, fur if you let 'em quit work and go around balloting and voting it won't do. It makes 'em biggity, and a biggity nigger is laying up trouble fur himself, because sooner or later he will get to thinking he is as good as one of these here Angle-Saxtons you are always hearing so much talk about down south.

He was sure a very quiet, peaceable old man, Mr. Davis was, and Bud says he was so dern foolish about law and order he had to up and shoot a man about fifteen years ago who heard him talking that a-way and said he reminded him of a Boston school teacher.

But Miss Lucy and Bud they tells me what all them night riders is fur. It seems this here tobacco trust is jest as mean and low down and unprincipled as all the rest of them trusts. The farmers around there raised considerable tobacco—more'n they did of anything else. The trust had shoved the price so low they couldn't hardly make a living. So they organized and said they would all hold their tobacco fur a fair price. But some of the farmers wouldn't organize—said they had a right to do what they pleased with their own tobacco. So the night riders was formed to burn their barns and ruin their crops and whip 'em and shoot 'em and make 'em fine, and also to burn a few trust warehouses now and then.

So fur as I could see they hadn't hurt the trust none to speak of, them night riders, but they had done considerable damage to their own country, fur folks was moving away, and the price of land had fell. Still, I guess they must of got considerable satisfaction out of raising the deuce nights that a-way, and sometimes that is worth a hull lot to a feller. As fur as I could make out both the trust and the night riders was in the wrong.

I asts George one day what he thought about it. George, he got mighty serious right off, like he felt his answer was going to be used to decide the hull thing by. He was carrying a lot of scraps on a plate to a hound dog that had a kennel out near George's cabin, and he walked his eyes right thoughtful, and scratched his head with the fork he had been scraping the plate with, but fur awhile nothing come of it. Finally George says:

"Use spec' math judgment des about de same as Marse Willyum's an' Miss Lucy's. I see notice hit, mos' ingin'ly am de same."

"That can't be, George," says I, "fur they think different ways."

"Den it dot am de case," says George, "dey ain't no one kin settle hit twell hit settles hitse'f." Then he told me about the war and the Kukluxes, and he said:

"Den arter de Kukluxes dey was de time Miss Lucy Buckner gwine ter ma'by Marse Prent McMakin. An' she don't want to ma'by him, if dey give her her druthers about hit. But ol' Marse Kunnel Hampton, her grampa, and her aunt, my Miss Lucy hyah, dey ain't gwine give her no druthers. And dey was mo' gwines on. But dat settle hitse'f too."

George he begins to chuckle, and I ast him how.

"Yass, sah, dat settle hitse'f. But I 'spec' Miss Lucy Buckner done he'p some in de settlement. Foh de day befoh de weddin' was gwine ter be she ups an' she runs off wid a Yankee frien' of her brother, Kunnel Tom Buckner. An' I 'spec' Kunnel Tom an' Marse Prent McMakin would o' settle him if dey evah had o' cotted him—dat dar David Ahmstrong!"

REPUBLICAN MEMBERS ARE IN OPEN REVOLT

Democrats Notified That They Must Change Tactics.

Washington, July 2.—Expectations of the president and his advisers for securing the non-partisan support of all parties in congress for the administration currency bill went glimmering when the Republican members of the house committee on banking and currency adopted a resolution expressing their disapproval of the star chamber methods employed by the Democrats in drafting and considering this important measure. The Republicans requested that all members of the committee be invited to attend meetings for considering the measure, and intimated strongly that the Democrats need look for no support of the measure to be put out unless they had a share in its preparation. The adoption of this resolution was the first formal expression of the dissatisfaction of the Republican members of the committee and of Republicans generally for being excluded from participation in the drafting of the bill, which they had contended should be drawn without regard to partisanship. Since the special session met frequent statements had been heard from Republicans that they desired to see the currency laws revised on a scientific basis by a bill which they could join the Democrats in supporting. These Republicans pointed out that their national platform as well as that of the Democratic party had pledged them to currency reform. The resolution was drawn for the purpose of serving notice on the Democrats that if they wish the support of the Republicans for the administration currency program they must adopt new methods for dealing with the measure in committee.

SEEKING GRAVES OF DEAD MATES

Cemetery Is the Chief Attraction at Gettysburg.

SAD QUEST OF VETERANS

Abandoning the Imposing Formalities Provided by Program Committee, Old Boys in Blue and Old Boys in Gray Are Giving the Most of Their Time to Devotion to Memories of Those Who Were Left on Battlefield.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 2.—With addresses by the secretary of war, the governors and generals, they had the official formal and ceremonial opening of the camp, but the veterans did not follow the program.

Of the 53,000 blue and gray veterans in camp only 3,000 spent the day with the governors and generals in the big reunion tent, while fully 30,000 of the veterans devoted the day to the 3,664 known and unknown dead in the national cemetery on the ridge immediately back of the camp.

The headstone of every grave was decorated with crossed American and Pennsylvania flags, which at a distance turned the Gettysburg battle section of the cemetery into a waving sea of carnations and forget-me-nots. And toward that holy flower bed covering Gettysburg's dead heroes their surviving comrades travelled all day in reverent pilgrimage. Hundreds of the old veterans got up with the sun at 5 o'clock and, on canes and crutches, they tottered up the hill to the soldier graves.

All day the stream toward the cemetery continued, and those who reached Cemetery hill spent nearly the whole day there, searching among the graves for their dead comrades, looking for "Hank's brother from our town," and for "Bill, a schoolmate of mine, who fell in my company."

Then the old veterans just lay down under the trees in the cemetery as close as possible to the discovered grave of a soldier comrade.

The grave brought fresh to the mind all the circumstances under which "Hank's brother" or "Bill of our company" had been killed and under the cemetery trees the old battle scenes were all revived.

No veteran found the grave of his company mate without uncovering his head and falling miserably in his attempt to hold back the tears.

And around the statue of the Pennsylvania leader of the first day's battle, General Reynolds, stood a crowd of uncovered veterans all day. Indeed, the cemetery was the greatest attraction to the veterans. Many of them neglected their mess call and stayed at the cemetery, under the trees fingering the soldier graves, dreaming all day about fifty years ago.

And while the old soldiers dreamt at the graves, the big circus tent where governors, generals, judges, bankers and railroad presidents sat on the stage ready to do honor to the veterans by reciting their deeds of valor and glory, was largely ignored by the honored guests, the old soldiers. The graves of "Bill" and "Hank's brother" and "Jake" were much closer to their hearts. But not a flower was placed on any of the graves.

"Those flags make about as pretty flowers as you would want anywhere," observed the veterans, and the few flowers that were brought along were carried away again. Only at General Reynolds's statue did the old veterans drop such modest flowers as they had picked on the battlefield.

ADMITS PLANNING MURDER

Woman Tells Officers How Her Husband Was Cruelly Murdered.

New Haven, Conn., July 2.—Mrs. Bessie Wakefield, aged twenty-four, and James H. Plew, aged forty-seven, were arrested in Bristol, twenty miles from here, last night, charged with the murder of William O. Wakefield, aged forty-six, the woman's husband, on June 22. The woman confessed that she and Plew planned to kill Wakefield and Plew clubbed him and then made him walk to the woods near Cheshire, nine miles away, at the point of a gun, where he shot him through the heart and left his body tied to a tree to give the impression of suicide. The body was found last Saturday, badly decomposed. Wakefield was jealous of Plew's attentions to his wife.

A CONSPIRACY IS ALLEGED

Another Indictment Growing Out of the 1910 "Cotton Corner."

New York, July 2.—Another indictment growing out of the cotton "corner" of 1910 has been filed in the United States district court for the southern district of New York. Those indicted are Colonel Robert M. Thompson of S. H. Pell & Co., Eugene G. Scales of Houston, Tex., Frank B. Hayne and William P. Brown of New Orleans, and Morris H. Rothschild of Woodville, Miss., who are charged with conspiring to restrain trade in cotton in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

TEAM TO SPRING NEW UNIFORMS

Arcadians Will be "All Dolled Up"
For Game Friday With Ninth
Infantry Team.

MANY SOLDIERS ARE COMING

Shelbyville Releases Moran and Halterman Will Pitch Game Here Sunday.

The Rushville team will be "all dolled up" for the game Friday with the Ninth Infantry team and will appear for the first time in their new uniforms. The uniforms are classy stuff being a light shade of blue with red letters. The caps and stockings are also red. The new uniforms are of the best grade and will arrive in time for the Fourth of July contest.

The soldiers are coming prepared to give the Arcadians a battle. Last Sunday the Ninth Infantry defeated the Blue Label team of Indianapolis 10 to 0. In the first game played here they were decidedly off form but this time promise to give Rushville a run for the game. A large crowd of soldiers will accompany the team from Fort Harrison and the novelty alone should attract a large crowd. The Rushville team is playing only the best teams in the state and the class of ball warrants support.

The usual line up will be used against the soldiers, with Yazel in right field and Avery in the box. Pierce and Bridgeman will complete the outer works and the infield will remain the same with Harris on third.

One of the best games of the season is promised for Sunday when the Shelbyville Reserves will come here for a return game. Shelbyville is coming with a special train and a large crowd of fans will make the trip. The fans here will have a chance to see Halterman, the Moscow wonder, formerly of the Rushville team in action Sunday against the Arcadians. Halterman will pitch the contest for Shelbyville and will try and beat his one time team mates. Manager Bruner of the Shelbyville aggregation has released Jack Moran and Halterman will do the box work for the Reserves.

With Halterman in the box the game should be a battle. Rushville easily won from Shelbyville a few weeks ago and the team is confident of turning the trick once more. The fans will welcome the news that Halterman is to pitch the contest. It is not known for sure who will be in the box for the Arcadians but a good man will be secured. Avery may possibly be used but Manager Walker does not like to take a chance with "Chick" especially after he itches the Fourth. Two days is not enough time for Avery and another man will have to be secured. The management has a line on Hollingsworth of Elwood and he may be the man.

Concerning the game Sunday the Shelbyville Republican says:

There will be quite a change in the line-up when the Reserves go to Rushville next Sunday. Manager Bruner is disgusted with Moran's box work of the last three games. Moran pitched good ball up until the last three games and since then he has been laying down. Earl Halterman, the Moscow boy, will take his place. Mugs Uriek will captain the team and Sherman Kealing has been appointed coach. The boys hope to start on their winning streak Sunday. Rushville was defeated Sunday by the same score handed to the local boys, 8 to 3, by the Cambridge City team. Two or three hundred fans are going to accompany the team to Rushville Sunday and help the boys come home with the long end of the score. The line-up for Sunday will probably be: Buck Sommers, catch; Halterman, pitch; Uriek, first base; Hulse, second base; Comstock, third base; Cos-sairt, short stop; Clem Emholt, right field; Molder, centerfield; Steffel, left field.

LOCAL HORSES IN FOURTH MEETING

Several Rushville Trainers Have Entries in Races to be Held at Shelbyville Friday.

OTHER THINGS ON PROGRAM

A number of Rushville horses are entered in the race meet which will be held at the Shelby county fair grounds at Shelbyville the Fourth. A number of people from here expect to attend. In addition to the races there will be a fiddler's contest and band concerts, and fireworks at night. Glen Miller of this city will be the starter.

The following entries have been made in the various races:

Free-for-all pace: Richard S. 2:13 1/4, in Clyde Netro's stable; Jennette Wilkes, 2:15, owned by Walter Bacon; Posey Patchen, 2:19 1/4, owned by Link Cole; Amy N., in Fred Dagler's stable and Billie W., in Frank Lindsay's stable.

2:35 trot: Springline, 2:24 1/4, by Blackline; General Fox, 2:22 1/4, by Gambetta Wilkes; Jester, by Exponent, owned by Clyde Netro; Chum, by Poem, owned at Shelbyville; Florence L., by Simmore and Budd. The last two are owned here.

Green pace: Billy Wilkes, by Tekmar, owned by Walter Bacon; Little Patchen, in Fred Dagler's stable; Gladation, in Clyde Netro's stable; Bessie Park, by Charley Hagt, 2:06 1/4; Baron Patchen, by The Patchen Boy, 2:10 1/4, in George Blackburn's stable; Florence Patchen, by the Patchen Boy, Bobbie L., in George Ransdall's stable.

street improvement and as none appeared, it was adopted.

Councilman Parsons stated that residents living near the city park had complained to him regarding a gang of boys which had a swing in the park. He stated that their conduct should require the attention of the police department, and advised the mayor to instruct the police to investigate. Policeman McAllister stated that the matter had never been reported to him. The park committee gave the council an informal report on the work of hiring a landscape gardener. Councilman Parsons stated that he would have some plans to submit to the council in the near future.

The Ohio Construction company, which is building West Tenth street, was given a certificate from the city for sixty-five per cent of the contract price, amounting to about $2500. The certificate will be taken up when the bonds are issued.

City Treasurer Foster has discovered that the city has been paying interest on certain bonds to an Indianapolis trust company that should not have been paid. There is a lot in Maple street that belongs to the State of Indiana and when the sewer improvement bonds were issued this lot was assessed. The bonds should pay out for the improvement but the city is about $13 short and it comes from this lot owned by the state.

INJURED IMPROVING.

Connorsville News: Lon Conner, who suffered a broken leg in the I. & C. traction wreck Sunday evening, passed a fairly good night and late this afternoon was resting easily. The attending physicians and family are well pleased with his condition. The Misses Marie and Frances Schafer, who also receive some injuries are recovering nicely. Miss Agnes Weever, who sustained a severe nervous shock is much better today.

MEACHAMS TAKE ON WYLIE BUNCH

Fast Contest Promised in Sunday School League—Both Teams to be Uniformed.

FIGHT TO KEEP OUT OF CELLAR

The Presbyterians and the Methodists will clash in the Sunday School league game tomorrow afternoon. The Methodists have one victory over the Presbyterian bunch and hope to repeat. In the first game between the two teams the Methodists won by the score of 10 to 7. Both teams expect to appear in their new uniforms. The Presbyterians have taken over the discarded uniforms of the Rushville team and the team is requested to appear at the Arcade pool room tomorrow afternoon and dress. The Methodists have ordered uniforms and hope to have them here in time for the game tomorrow. Carr will be in the box for the Methodist and either Buell or McGuire will be on the mound for the Presbyterians. By defeating the Methodist the Presbyterians can go into a tie for second place with the Methodists and if they lose, its the cellar for them.

The league is still in debt and beginning tomorrow an admission fee of ten cents will be charged at the gate. This is thought to be a better plan than taking up a collection. The game will be called at four-fifteen o'clock.

BIG TIME AT SCHOOL PICNIC

First Presbyterians See Ball Game and Eat Basket Dinner.

A hundred and fifty people attended the First Presbyterian Sunday school picnic at Link's grove east of the city yesterday. The afternoon program was cut short by the thunder storm, but the crowd managed to reach Rushville before any rain fell. The rain did not interfere, however, with the ball game, which was the chief event of the afternoon. The Sunday school team defeated a "picked" team from Glenwood, but the score was not divulged. It is rumored that everybody forgot to keep score. A big basket dinner was served and the children feasted on ice cream cones all day.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.

It is believed that an attempt was made last night to rob the Adams Produce Company. A light in the basement was noticed and the police with Walter Thomas, the manager, went to the place but found that none of the poultry was missing. Mr. Thomas turned the lights out when he left and it is the belief of the police that the place was entered with robbery in view.
